COMMENT OF THE DAY

The Big Debate

TR Elsenhower has said IVI his piece as predicted. Mr Gromyko has made his predictable accusations. After them more people will speak. Perhaps they will accuse each other. Perhaps they will make a suggestion or two. But from this initial opening it seems sure that the interminable game of chess will continue governi dnys. volumes of words, and hundreds of hours of incredibly efficient translating virtuosity till it runs its full course and reaches an inevitable stalemate.

In terms of positive achievement the United Nations has not made a great return for the great investment of cash and hope which the whole world placed in it. This may seem specially disappointing now, for there was a distinct hope in aummit meeting negotiations which have led up to this meeting, that the meeting would be one for genuine negotiation rather than simply sterile debate. And never before has any meeting in this building had so elaborate a build-up or had so much hope and work Invished on it.

Around Jerusalem in concentric circles the world is ravaged by the Middle problem which faces this assembly. Jews are circled and far outnumbered by implacable among whom Israel's jobless immovable Arab exiles already fancy. the scent of blood. And Jordan is as much threatened by these malcontents Most threatened man in the world is Jordan's indomitable King Husseln whose sudden death would spell another Nasser victory. King Saud too, faced by well financ. d enemies and with forty brothers-idle sons of the same rich, ambitious, and from law-abiding father-is not in an enviable position either. But in Nasser's camp all is not well either. The innocent statement made by Mr Dulles recently which so enraged the Colonel that "Nasser is not necessarily the only Arabi leader", seems to have acted like sun on mud and discontent begins to crack the smooth new surface of the United Arab Republic. Whispers say that Frencheducated, business-minded Syria is restive in her marriage with strange Nasser's peasant state. Against - this, President Eisenhower's vision may well appeal-"A widening circle of new nations that will end in a world community of open societies."

May Give $100m For Ike's Plan

Washington, Aug. 13. THE United States is reported to be willing to advance L U.S.$100 million as its share of the Middle East Development Institution proposed by President Eisenhower in his speech to the United Nations General Assembly today.

It was officially announced in Rome that the Italian Government would "take into consideration the possibility of making a financial contribution" to the

Meanwhile top advisers of the United States and British missions began conferences in New York on formal action to follow up Eisenhower's proposals, which were popularly received by other UN delegates (see page 3)

The President raised so many ideas that no delegation was ready to resume debate this afternoon, pending consultations with governments, and the Assembly adjourned until temorrow morning, when Mr Selwyn Although stressing the desirability of an Arab Develop-Lloyd, British Foreign Secretary, is expected to speak.

Considering Financial Grant

Usually reliable sources said they did not expect the early tabling of a resolution embodying the President's proposals, but preliminary work on such a document would go forward, with the British delegation filling an important consultative role. It was not disclosed immediately whether the eventual draft would be sponsored by both the United States and Britain,

As the President emphasised, the proposed Middle East Development Institution would have to be under the leadership of the Arab states themselves and would be supported by the United States only if the Arab countries themselves supported it.

English Land Title As Quiz Prize

Eastbourne, Aug. 13. A United States television quiz winner may earn for himself the title of "Lord of Eastbourne", it was learned here today.

Mr William Reginald Hipwell, owner of Eastbourne's 13th munor house. announced that he had cabled America suggesting that his property valued at £8,000 sterling might make a suitable alternative as a quiz prize to the Scottish island of Stroma. The Columbia Broadcasting System recently bought Stroma for £8,500 sterling but the suggestion that it should be offered as a prize started a controversy.

Mr Hipwell said he was in cable touch with Mr Bob Silvers, producer of the quiz contest, offering the empty old manor house instead.

It had a mediaeval musicians gallery with a pricat's hiding hole and Elizabethan murais. "With it goes the right of the owner by title deed to call himself Lord of the Manor of Eastbourne," Mr Hipwell added.

This is disputed by the Eastbourne Town Corporation which owns the resor s later manor house, built in the 17th century, and which claims the title for itself.—China Mail Special.

Moon Rocket Speculation Embarrassing

New York, Aug. 13. Speculation about when the United States will fire its first rocket towards the meen "is embarrassing officials" at the missile test centre at .Cape Canaveral, Florida.

This was reported here today Major - General Yates, Chief of the Centre, in an interview with reporters. General Yates said that he himself did not know when the attempt would be made. At the same time, he said he agreed with Mr Roy Johnson Director of the Advanced Research Projects Agency, that the chances for success are "no octter than one in 10." He defined success as getting the missite to within 50,000 miles of the moon.

Four Stages

General Yates said the plan was to send up a four-slage rocket to reach the moon or its vicinity in two and a half days. To succeed, the missile will have to blast its wuy through the earth's atmosphere at a speed of 35,000 feet (or nearly seven miles) per second "Our instrumentation should tell us immediately (after firing) whether it will succeed," he "This is the first time we will have fired this particular combination of vehicles. We have had very good success with the first and second stages in the past.

We would be very happy if it succeeded on the first try." He said no date had yet been axed for the moon shot: · However, informed sources in Washington said that the first attempt may be made next Sundry but that the launching time

SELECT DONOR

MR. Philip Hawes, 46, of Gonville Road, Thornton Heath, Surrey, a furniture salesman in Croydon, has just qualified to join the National Blood Transfusion Service's select band of donors who have given over 100 plats. It is estimated that there are only about a score of them in Britain with the present record standing at 119 pints. Mr Hawes gives a pint of his blood every three months, and thinks it will take him 10 years to reach his target of 150 pints. Mr Hawes started giving his blood in 1936 after an appeal on a cinema screen following a local train disaster. He gave 22 pints to the British Red Cross Blood Transfusion Service, which provides blood for immediate use. Then he gave another 50 pints while serving in the Forces during the war, and has given the balance to the National Blood Transfusion Service since then. Today there are over 650,000 registered blood donors in Britain.

LONDON BABY SHOW

ELLIOTT THE MASTER

He Makes A Four-Minute Mile Look Rather Slow By DENNIS HART

Herbert James Elliott is the man who makes a four-minute mile look rather slow and not only from a time point of view. In a four-minute mile the runners look as though they are going fast. And it is not only the speed that is apparent. So is the tension.

But not with Elliott. Reeling off laps of a minute or less each he seems to be coasting along, running well within himself. In fact he is.

This, I think, is as even more telling commentary on his ability than his record time of 3 mins. 54.5 secs., in Dublin.

Athletics has seen many good milers and quite a few great ones. But there has never been anyone like Herb Elliottthe Master Miler.

David Laidlaw, who is a Boot, has travelled widely in Eastern Europe, and has made a special study of conditions imposed by Soviet Russia.

SUMMARY: In spite of a tightening up of the already vicious criminal code of 1950, crime continues unabated in Czechoslovakla. Laidlaw suggests that increased hooliganism, pilfering and other anti-social acts may be the inhabitants' way of demonstrating their contempt for a legal system designed to ensure their subjection to their Communist overlords.

When people see their legal system undermined to serve a party, how do they react? In Czechoslovakia the most significant effect has decline in public morality, manifest in increased hooliganism, pilfering and other anti-social activities.

Appeal For Cyprus Peace

Nicosia, Aug. 13. Left-wing, right-wing independent and Turkish trade union chiefs in Cyprus tonight issued a joint appeal to their members to avoid all provocation and any action which might lead to a renewal of hostilly between Greeks and

Turks in the island. The trade union leaders declared at a press conference this appeal means "a pledge by 60,000 organised workers to maintain the present truce in Cyprus."

The appeal follows the truce called by the Greek and Turkish underground' movements and the relaxation of the night curfew imposed by the British ofter communal violence flared in the island resulting in heavy loss of life.-Reuter.

Preventing Corrosion In Ship Boilers

EXPERIMENTS into the Li use of a new type of corresion inhibition agent are being carried out in Britain by the Chemical Research Laboratory of the Department of Scientific and Industrial Research.

The material, which is called eyelohexylamine carbonate, ecems likely to be especially useful in protecting the five side of bollers during the periods in which they are idle. The problem of preventing the fact that there are large inaccessible residues of hygroscople (water-absorbing) residues left in the fire-boxes and flues of boilers when they are shut down.

EXPERIMENTS

experiments, scrapings of mild steel were taken from flueways and exposed to a relative humidity of 84 per cent. When the corresion inhibiting agent was introduced the overall rate at which corrosion took place was lowered. At the same time, the use 'of the 'eyclohexylamine carbonate caused some pitting, or extremely local corrosion, to occur.

Further experiments are now being carried out in which the Dangers heavy rust deposits that normally occur in shut-down bollers in actual practice are being more closely 'simulated, ...

These experiments will include a more detailed examination of the pitting, which could; THE world's main shipping of course, be dangerous it it occurred when cyclohexylamine earbonate was supplied to actual

Young Girl Stole To Go To School

The summer holidays were over and it was time to go back to school and pay school fees and buy new baoks.

But for an 11-year-old girl, it was different from last year. Her mother, who was a household maid, had been out of work for the past two months, She did not have any money to give her daughter for school ives and books.

Anti-Western Demonstrations 'Amazingly Well Organised" Say Tourists

China Mail Reporter

The anti-American and anti-British demonstrations in Peking on July 17, were described this morning as "amazingly well organised," by two Canadians who were touring Peking at the time of the mass protests.

The Canadians were, Austin Hamilton, a 28-year-old Chartered Accountant, and Jim Clarke, a qualified engineer, also aged 28. Both are graduates of Toronto University.

OLD Hongkong": The Island supported only a few thousand Chinese inhabitants when the British occupation took place (a little over 5,000). These were entirely pensants and fisherfolk, with some pirates among them, as no trade whatever was done here. The people who dwelt in Hongkong in pre-British days largely occupied matshed huts, but it is probable that fairly substantial stone dwellings of one storey, built of granite and roughly hown boulders with a mortar composed of clay and a little lime were in existence even then. In fact it is known that a fairly substantial village community had long been settled at Stanley (then known as Chick-chu) Naturally, any permanent settlers would creet dwellings eapable of weathering the typhoons to which they would be periodically exposed. The question of what race of Chinese these settlers belong to is a matter of some interest, in view of lairly recent research into the origin of the Kwangtung inhabitants; for it is natural to assume that Hongkong's original Chinese population were the same type as on the mainland.

There is evidence that several dialects were in use at the time of the British advent, and we can proceed to a brief examination of these.

Three classes of Chinese speaking different dislects were emongst the early settlers of the Colony. According to Eitel, the town of Kowloon was formed by settlers speaking the Cantonese dialect, called Puntis (ht. Aborigines). These Puntis also occupied the hamlets of Matauwal (near Kowloon City) Kwantaliau (East Point), and Wongneichong on the island of Hongkong, and to them were added Tanglungchau and Pokfulam.

COME time after the Puntis occupied the best portions of Kowloon and Hongkong, settlers from the northwest of the Canton provinces, speaking a different dialect, called Hakkas (lit. Stranger) began to push their way between the Punti settlements.

Thus the Hakka villages of Mongkok, Tsopaitsai, Tsimshalsul, and Matauchung were formed on Kowloon Peninsula, and on Hongkong Island the Hungheunglou, hamlets of Tunglowan, Tytamtuk, Chaiwan, Hoktsui, Wongmakok and Little. Hongkong. were also formed by the Hakkas - Taikoktsul, and Tokwawan on Kowloon, and Tsattsimiu, Shuitsingwan, Wongkoktsui and Akungugam on the Island of Hongkong, Later on natives speaking another dialoct (Swatow) settled at Shaukiwan, Hunghom and Youmati. These scafaring men called Hoklos. The carliest inhabitants of Hongkong island were presumably Puntis, though a considerable variation is possible in view of the roving nature of some of them (the so-called boat people, for instance) who must have formed the fisherfolk (and pirates) of early Hongkong. The district of the Stanley villagers is Punti.

There was a large influx of Chinese from Canton when the Colony was founded. These were welcomed and helped to form the Colony—they were morchants, tradesmen artisans; and within a few years were building fine big stone and brick houses, making roads and supplying bread, footwear and clothing (though; one old commentator complains of the execrable cut the tellors gave him) to the foreign residents. Tho costern part of the town, known as the Bazaar, was largely given over to Chinese shops,

But this did not imply that the authorities welcomed everyone with open arms, nor that there was plenty of land to be given away for nothing: the chronicles show us that the Government took steps early in 1844 to disperse squatters who crecked temporary buildings without permission,

It was intimated that a large number of Chinese had settled along Queen's Road and other parts of the waterfront and erected matsheds and wooden houses without permission and without paying rent to the Crown, the Burveyor General had been instructed to give them notice to remove themselves and their structures within a reasonable time, otherwise they would be evicted. Since then the problem of squatters has gone beyond the city limits, and remains a bugboar of the Land Office in most of the Colony's
